

Any rule requiring that those sending faxes must have signed consent should exempt job applicants (who are advertising their services) and their agents.

As written now the rule will be interpreted to require job hunters to seek written permission before faxing their resumes.